

Type 2 Diabetes meter review

In April 2023, NHS brought out new guidance for patients using blood glucose meters and test strips, a national assessment was undertaken to better understand the products available and how they meet the needs of all people living with diabetes. The new guidance will ensure that people living with diabetes have continued access to clinically effective meters and test strips.

You are invited to come along to a diabetes health promotion afternoon where you can choose a new blood glucose meter that is most suitable for you:
